When you sign your Application for Asylum, Withholding of Removal, and for Relief Under the Convention Against Torture in English that you are going to receive, you will be confirming that the information in your application and your evidence is true and correct. There are criminal consequences for submitting an application that you know contains false information or that has no basis in law or fact. When you sign the Application for Asylum, Withholding of Removal, and for Relief Under the Convention Against Torture in English, you are authorizing U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services to give any information in your immigration file to the Immigration Court.

Important warning: If it is determined that an asylum applicant has made a false or frivolous asylum application, the applicant will permanently lose eligibility for any benefit under the immigration laws of the United States. You cannot avoid this even if someone advised you to put false information in your application.
